Recently I seen film "Five nights at Freddy's". It's maybe only film what I can remember right now, because I don't realy watch movies or series. It's not the best what Scott Cawlton, autor of FNaF games, could do, but it's still interesting.

This film is about Miachel Smidt, who lost his ronger brother in childhood and wants to know any new clues about maniac who kidnaped his brother. He wants to get clues from his dreams, so he sleeps a lot, but he also needs to look after his little sister. She's pretty associl and talks only with ghousts. Miachel becomes a security guard in abandoned pizzeria named "Freddy Fazbear's" where animatronics used to make shows.

Actually, I don't like this film. It's supposd to be a horron movie, but there's nothing what can actualy scare you. Like, you can believe what these animatronics can by liked by kids, but they're don't seem to be scarier in right moment. Honestly, I wasn't consered about main hero or others, because there were no danger until William Atton apperiance. William Afton saved movie in my eyes.
